

Mary McGee, MD

Dr Mary McGee was raised in the Air Force and studied medicine at Texas A&M and UTMB Galveston. She then trained in Internal Medicine at LSUMC and VAMC in Shreveport Louisiana. She attained her fellowship in Nephrology and Hypertension at LSUMC&VAMC in Shreveport. After her studies in medicine, she chose to move to the Hallsville area where she has resided for 24 years.

Mary practices at the Center for Cardiac Rehabilitation in Marshall, Texas. She is the collaborating physician for the Hallsville Medical Clinic adult patients and also oversees therapy patients as the Medical Director at the East Texas Treatment Center in Kilgore.

Mary McGee is married and has one son who has recently graduated from high school and will be attending college very soon. She lives in Hallsville with her husband and son. They own a ranch and raise black angus cattle, quarter horses, donkeys, chickens, dogs, and even a cat. They enjoy the outdoors and bale the hay that their farm uses.

Mary enjoys hunting and fishing with her family, boating at the lake, and gardening. When working in the yard she enjoys being treated to the sound of songbirds and the flitting of hummingbirds.
